Office Hours: Monday 10:30-12:00 or by appt

This course explores the history of health and health care in Canada, with a focus on the late 19th and 20th century. Topics will include colonization, infectious disease, and Aboriginal health; the evolution of medical and nursing professions; the emergence of the modern hospital; mental health, psychiatry and the asylum; cancer; nutrition, alternative therapies; childbirth; eugenics and disability. Analytical categories of gender, race, ethnicity, class, and sexuality will run throughout the material.

Format

The class is one 2.75 hour seminar per week. Seminars will focus on discussion of assigned reading, with in-class writing, research workshops, videos, etc. Students will be expected to lead or co-lead a seminar, and participate fully in discussions. The seminar will conclude with a 'mini-conference' in April where students will present their research to the seminar, and peer-critique a fellow student's research paper.

Required Texts

The following texts are mandatory reading for the course, and are available at the bookstore. The instructor will also make every effort to have these titles available on library reserve. Additional reading (articles) will be available digitally.

C+ = 66-69

C = 60-65

D = 50 - 59

F = 49 -

Late Penalties:

Students will be required to submit their written work on time, in class. Work that is not handed in to the instructor personally in class should be left with the receptionist in the main office of St. John's College. While there is no late penalty, late papers will receive limited feedback. SHOULD STUDENTS REQUIRE EXTENSIONS, PLEASE DISCUSS IT WITH THE INSTRUCTOR IN ADVANCE OF THE DUE DATE, out of consideration for the instructor and the class.

It is particularly important to hand in the first draft of your research essay on time, to both the instructor and the fellow seminar participant who is critiquing your essay. If work is submitted late to the seminar, the quality of interaction and feedback on your essay is going to suffer, and therefore the quality of your final product will be lower. Late work is also detrimental to the seminar.

Academic Integrity:

All written work submitted for this course must be original. Students are advised to consult the University of Manitoba regulations, as outlined in the section on “Academic Integrity” of the General Academic Regulations in the online Academic Calendar & Catalog, regarding plagiarism, cheating and impersonation.

The common penalty in Arts for plagiarism on a written assignment is a grade of F on the paper and a final grade of F (DISC) (for Disciplinary Action) for the course. For the most serious acts of plagiarism, such as purchase of an essay and repeat violations, this penalty can also include suspension for a period of up to five (5) years from registration in courses taught in a particular department/program in Arts or from all courses taught in this Faculty.

The Faculty also reserves the right to submit student work that is suspected of being plagiarized to Internet sites designed to detect plagiarism or to other experts for authentication.

Grade Appeal:

Students who wish to appeal a grade given for term work must do so within TEN (10) working days after the grade for the term work has been made available to them.

Uncollected term work will become the property of the Faculty of Arts and will be subject to confidential destruction.

Seminar Conduct:

Upper year and graduate seminars are shaped by the quality and nature of student participation and interaction. Here are some things to keep in mind, and instructor expectations of you as a seminar participant.

This is a course that emphasizes and encourages class discussion. Think of the class as a forum for trying out new ideas, and not as a place where you have to get things “right.” Our class sessions will revolve around group discussion of the readings assigned for that session, and ideas that arise from them. When you are reading class materials, ideas that may seem tangential might come to mind: don’t be afraid to bring these to class too, to help broaden our discussions. Don’t be surprised if lecture material gives a very different reading or interpretation of a subject from that of the assigned readings; or, if other students seem to have different understandings than your own. We are here to have debates about alternate interpretations, and are open to finding new ways of looking at things.

Each student will lead one seminar during the course of the year. Everyone is expected to prepare thoroughly for seminar discussion, completing the required reading and thinking of a few questions/themes for class discussion, in advance of our meeting. Seminar discussion and debate will be respectful of the individual and a spirit of engagement and learning. This applies to both students and the instructor. Individual students will not be allowed to dominate discussion, intimidate or deride others, or exclude any members of the group from full participation. Students are expected to be generous and considerate of the needs and opinions of others.
