Course Objectives:

This course is intended to provide an introduction to the field of Criminology. The first section of the course involves learning about the origins and background of the field; examining sources of law in society, defining 'crime' and 'criminals', describing sources of information about crime, and examining the individual and social variables that are related to criminal behaviour. The second section, which constitutes the bulk of the material to be covered, includes a critical introduction to the major theories that have been developed in an attempt to explain crime. Students will also develop an understanding of the 'real life' policy implications that attach to particular criminological theories and orientations. The third section will involve discussion of specific patterns and types of crime in Canada. At all stages of the course, students will be encouraged to take an active role through class participation and small-group discussion.

Group Writing Assignments

For the purpose of these assignments, the class will be divided into working groups which will remain the same for the entire course. At different times during the course (normally every second Friday), you will be given a question or set of questions for discussion and for which your group must submit a written response. The material you require to answer these questions is found in both the readings and the lectures. One of the group members (ideally a different one each time) is responsible for writing down and submitting the answers to the instructor at the end of class. All group members will receive the same mark for each assignment. If you miss a week, a grade of zero will be given for that week's assignment. All members of the group are expected to participate in the development of the answer for the assignment. Toward the end of the term, each student will rate his or her own performance on the group exercises, as well as the performance of the other group members.

Please Note:

University of Manitoba Senate Policy #1307 requires “a post-examination review of final grades in multisectioned courses that will ensure an equitable correspondence between grades and level of performance in all sections.” Accordingly, the final grade distribution in this course may be raised or lowered to achieve this equity and, therefore, your final grade may be changed.
