Class location: 236 Isbister
Credit Hours: 3

Course Objectives: This course uses historical and cross-cultural standpoints to examine the social and cultural construction of contemporary “gender” and “sexuality,” along with the ideological and material structures which (re)produce them. The initial focus is on: the process of sex/gender acquisition; the development of gender roles and sexuality; and on the relations between and among genders. The latter part of the course explores the reality of living with socially constructed and perpetuated notions of genders and sexualities. Here we address: the historical emergence of categories of gender and sexual identity; the history of women’s liberation, gay rights struggles and movements; lesbian, gay, transsexual and transgender communities; and the possibilities and restraints of identity politics. By the end of the course, students should have an appreciation for the significance of historical and cross-cultural perspectives on gender and sexuality and a basic understanding of a variety of major issues regarding gender acquisition, gender roles, sexualities, and relations between and among women and men and genders.

Students are expected to enter the course with a basic understanding of the main theoretical perspectives in sociology. The purpose of the course is to develop a critical analysis of sociological theories on gender and sexuality. The course offers a variety of viewpoints with the goal of providing a critical presentation of some of the issues in this complex field.

Classes consist of lectures, audio and video presentations, as well as discussion and presentations from students. Students will learn or strengthen skills in critical thinking, reading and essay writing, group problem-solving and oral presentations.

Be sure to keep a hard/paper copy of all assignments handed in. In case of misplacement, a copy will be required. To avoid late submissions (which are all docked 2% per day, including weekend days) due to computer and printer difficulties, students should make hard copies of draft work and keep a back up copy on disk of all work done on a word processor, including the final product, and submit a disk or draft copy to verify their progress in the event of computer/printer failure. Backing up files also assists in cutting down on such problems. Should you be unable to personally hand in an assignment, have someone else hand it into the Sociology Office on or before the due date. Work slipped under the instructor’s office door will NOT be accepted.

Required Texts:

Feinberg, Leslie. (1998). Trans Liberation: Beyond pink or blue. Boston: Beacon Press

Nelson, Adie. (2006). Gender in Canada. Toronto: Pearson/ Prentice Hall

All readings listed in syllabus as handouts (H) or on reserve (R) in the University of Manitoba Elizabeth Dafoe library. You are responsible for obtaining and reading all of these documents.

Student Evaluation:

Due Date	Assignment/ Test	Weight
May 11	Research Paper Proposal	05%
May 14	Term test #1	25%
May 22	Term test #2	20%
May 30	Class Participation	10%
May 30	Individual Paper	20%
Various	Group Project/Presentation	20%
NOTE:	There is no final exam	100%

Individual/Group Project/Presentation = 20%

Each student is responsible for participating in a solo or group project and presenting the findings to the class, and each person is responsible for preparing a critical report on the assigned subject area and presenting it to class on the assigned date. Be sure to:

1. Foreground the most significant information in the reading(s);
2. Present the information in an engaging and interesting manner
3. Focus on particular points of interest to generate class discussion/participation;
4. Make every effort to involve the class in discussion. (Providing questions for the class from the readings often facilitates class participation and discussion);
5. Approach the material critically, drawing on other theories/author's studied, additional education and, where appropriate, life experience.

This assignment provides students with an opportunity to: thoroughly understand one particular area of the course material; become familiar with classmates in a way not facilitated by standard classroom learning; and assist the class as a whole to use a variety of techniques to add to the dynamics of the learning process by participating in a group project.

The entire group is assigned a grade out of 10 for the presentation. All members must contribute. Each student hands in a short, individually crafted, response paper to the professor in the class following the presentation. The paper is to be no more than five (5) pages in length and is to provide an overview of the reading(s) and address personal observations, thoughts and criticisms of the material presented. Comments are not to focus on group members, the group process or other group presentations. The write-up is a personal critical and reflective response to both the material and the subject of the presentation. Students will receive an individual grade out of 10 for this portion of the assignment. Students not meeting all of these requirements will receive a mark of zero. Late submissions will be docked 2% per day, including each weekend day.

Research Paper Proposal = 5% May 11th Each student is to complete an individual 12 page paper (equivalent to 250 @ 12 font size words per page) on a topic of their choice and relevant to the course. A statement of the paper topic, a detailed outline of the paper, and a tentative bibliography of at least 5 academic references is required no later than MAY 11th. Failure to hand in this assignment results in a mark of zero (0) for 5% of the final grade. Late submissions are docked 2% per day, including each weekend day.

Term Tests (25% and 20% = total of 45%) Tests will cover all course material in manageable chunks. Students are expected to write tests on the specified test dates. Missed tests will warrant a zero. Only under exceptional circumstances will alternate dates be considered. Should students find themselves in this unusual situation, see the professor with the appropriate documentation (i.e. Doctors certificate, death certificate) to make alternative arrangements.

Each student is expected to write and complete 2 in-class tests; one on May 14 (25%) and the other on May 22 (20%). Tests may consist of definitions, short answer questions and a selection of essay questions. Test questions cover material from the texts, videos, lectures, class discussions and group presentations. Full marks are given for answers demonstrating a scope of knowledge, a depth of understanding, appropriate use of citation and examples, and critical analysis.

Individual Paper = 20% May 30th The final 12 page research paper, which is an elaboration of the approved research paper proposal (and must accompany the final paper), is to be written in formal essay style, and handed in at the beginning of the last class of the course on May 30th. There will be no extensions and late papers will warrant a zero. Only those papers accompanying previously approved and marked research paper proposals will be accepted and marked.

Class Participation = 10% May 25th Students are evaluated on their class participation, which includes but is not limited to: attending class, reading and thinking about material prior to class and actively listening to and providing constructive input and feedback in class (in small groups or larger class discussion). You will share the responsibilities of facilitation, note taking, time keeping, and reporting back to the class in an equitable and meaningful way. You are expected to be considerate and respectful of the needs and rights of others in the class. Anyone leaving class early must inform the professor at the beginning of class. Persistent disturbance in the classroom (talking and whispering during class lectures; passing notes; arriving late or leaving early etc) is rude, disrespectful and disruptive to the classroom atmosphere and to the learning environment. This behavior is not tolerated and its perseverance will lead to student disbarment from the course. All cell phones are to be turned off before entering classroom and not be turned back on until having exited the classroom; if not, cell phones will be confiscated.

Efforts have been made to find texts and articles that are both accessible and challenging. You are expected to complete readings BEFORE class and bring notes and questions from the readings to each class in order to participate in class discussion. Students will present specific readings to the class in a group presentation. Any student experiencing difficulty with the course material is encouraged to consult the professor before the problem gets out of hand.

Grades

A+ 95-100	Exceptional. Thorough knowledge of concepts and/or techniques and exceptional skill or great originality in their use in to satisfy the requirements of an assignment
A 88-94	Excellent. Thorough knowledge of concepts and/ or techniques together with a high degree of skill and/or some elements of originality in their use to satisfy the requirements of an assignment or course.
B+ 81-87	Very Good. Very good level of knowledge of concepts and/or techniques together with considerable skill in their use to satisfy the requirements of an assignment or course.
B 76-80	Good. Good level of knowledge of concepts and/ or techniques along with a considerable degree of skill in their use to satisfy the requirements of an assignment or course.
C+ 70-75	Competent. Acceptable level of knowledge of concepts and/or techniques with a fairly high degree of skill in their use to satisfy the requirements of an assignment or course.
C 60-69	Fairly Competent. Acceptable level of knowledge of concepts and/ or techniques together with some degree of skill in their use to satisfy requirements of an assignment or course.
D 50-59	Passing. Minimal knowledge of concepts and/ or techniques together with some ability in their use to satisfy the requirements of an assignment or course.
F 0-49	Failing. No knowledge of the required concepts and/ or techniques with an inability to use them to satisfy the requirements of an assignment.

The conversion of percentage grades to letter grades will be rounded up only when students are .5 away from the next letter grade. (e.g. 69.5 will be converted to 70 = C+)

Students with concerns about the evaluation of tests and assignments are to submit the work in question with a full, written explanation of the concern to the professor no later than one day after the assignment has been handed back to the class. An appointment will then be made to discuss the student's concerns. Any student found guilty of academic misconduct may lose part of or the entire term marks for a course, may be given an F grade in the course, placed on a disciplinary suspension or expelled from the University. Students should acquaint themselves with the University's policy on 'Plagiarism and Cheating' and 'Examinations: Personations' found in the University Undergraduate Calendar.

Individual and Group Presentations

- 1) Foreground the most significant information in the readings. This is a limited overview of the assigned text;
- 2) Focus on particular points of interest to generate class discussion and participation. This may be one or two points for each group member;
- 3) Make every effort to involve class members in discussion. You may choose to:
 - i) Provide questions for the class from the readings or from your own understanding of the material;
 - ii) Make an outrageous comment(s) about the reading, or
 - iii) Present an alternative view to facilitate class participation and discussion.
- 4) Approach the material critically, drawing on life experience and additional readings or education where appropriate. What is the bias of the author, is something/someone left out, is this an inclusive perspective, why or why not?;
- 5) Present the information in an engaging and interesting manner. The presentations so far have been able to do this. Be creative, take risks.

Write Up: Personal response to reading and presentation

- 1) Provide an overview of the reading by foregrounding the most significant information in the reading(s). This overview should present the main arguments, theories, or points of the reading.
- 2) Provide your personal observations of the reading(s).
Why you dis/like the reading? Explain how the content interesting, or not.
Was the reading too theoretical/not theoretical enough? Was it too full of jargon?
Was it well written, easy to follow, lots of examples?
- 3) Criticisms of the reading(s).
What is the bias of the author?
Is there a reason why the author is writing from this perspective, or possibly excluding other perspectives or peoples realities and experiences?
How does the argument proposed connect with, challenge, or trouble theories, arguments of other author's/theorists?
- 4) Provide your personal response to reading:
Did the article make you think differently? How and why/why not?
Are you more steadfast in your understanding, thinking, or opinion of an issue now?
Why/ why not? Are there questions that have been raised from reading this work?
What are they, why are they important to you? Has your thinking been challenged by the reading? Why/why not?
What would make the reading more interesting, relevant or applicable to your education/life?
